With the passing of each hour, each moment, and each breath, time adopts the present and converts it into past. As it ages night to day, heals all wounds, and erodes boulders to pebbles, time conquers each one of us. Often it is our enemy, passing by too quickly; in other instances it is a friend, bringing hope for tomorrow. Nevertheless, time is ever present, ever ticking, and ever memorable. As it passes, time creates new memories. These cherished thoughts are the sole entities of the past that time allows us to hold as it gently pushes us toward the future. Irreplacable photographs and captivating words allow emotions, moments, and faces of yesterday to live on endlessly. In an attempt to capture special moments from the past year, the editors of Sojourn '97 have searched for both the perfect picture and words. Tucked withing these binders lies a collection of memories which will allow our moments in time to last forever.

Class of 1997

Our Time has Come

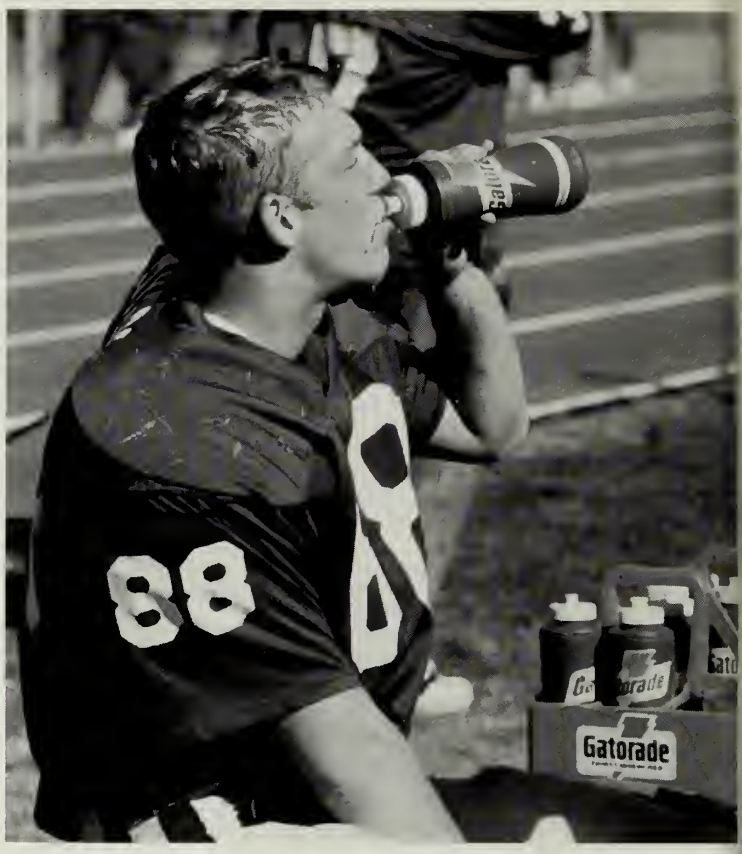
The Best of Times

Something was in the air as the group of older, more experienced students walked through the doors of N.H.S.. They could all feel it. In fact, they could almost taste it . What exactly was happening this first day of school that made it so different from the rest? It was the Class of 1997's first day of senior year, the last "first day" that they would ever have together. This group of individuals faced it all together, from learning how to read to ordering graduations gowns. As little kids they played hopskotch and made finger paintings; as young adults, they produced a school play and filled out college applications. No longer were these students individuals all alone in a big school, but a single unit acting as a family. Just as any family does, the group had its ups and downs, but with cooperations and heart they always managed to come out on top. While some looked fondly at moving into the real world, other seniors were apprehensive about leaving the comforts of home and their peers. At one point in time they couldn't wait to get out of school and move on to bigger and better things. As graduation approached, however, the members longed to go back a few years, or even weeks, and do it all over again. The few moments that they had left with one another became priceless and were remembered through pictures that would last for years. As each member of the Class of 1997 received his diploma, the petty quarrels and disagreements were washed away and only happy, and perhaps sad, memories remained. Now the euphoric feeling of entering N.H.S as a senior changed to the overwhelming emotion of leaving as graduates.



"Two sugars or one?". Chris Henson asks his favorite question of the night.

A little friendly conversation is a perfect way to start the day for Carrie Winn and Nikia DeLeon.

Taking time out from battle, gladiator Eric Myers quenches his thirst.

"Wow, outside school doors the world is much more relaxing," notices Jed Pittman as he faces the real world.

Hoping that a loud scream would clear the jammed hallways, Jesse Denson lets out a roar and clears the way for Robert Bakanauskas.

"I just took a test this long," says Rhiannon Kirby to the nearest bystander.

"Ah, modern technology," marvels Becky Mowry as she perfects her typewriting skills.

While Nick Terizzi performs a lunch time taste test, Rich Cekanavich is more than happy to help with the experiment.

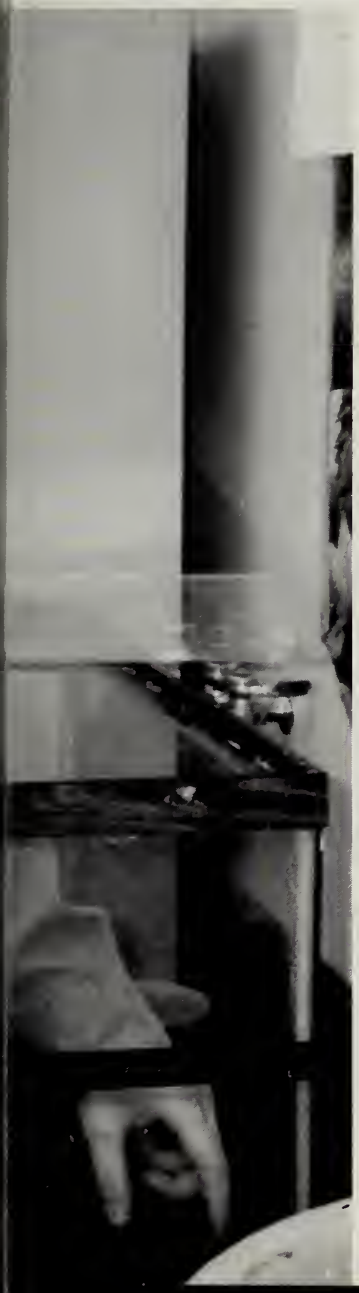
"Soccer is an art, and I have finally mastered it," declares Jeff Kaminski as he successfully controls the ball.

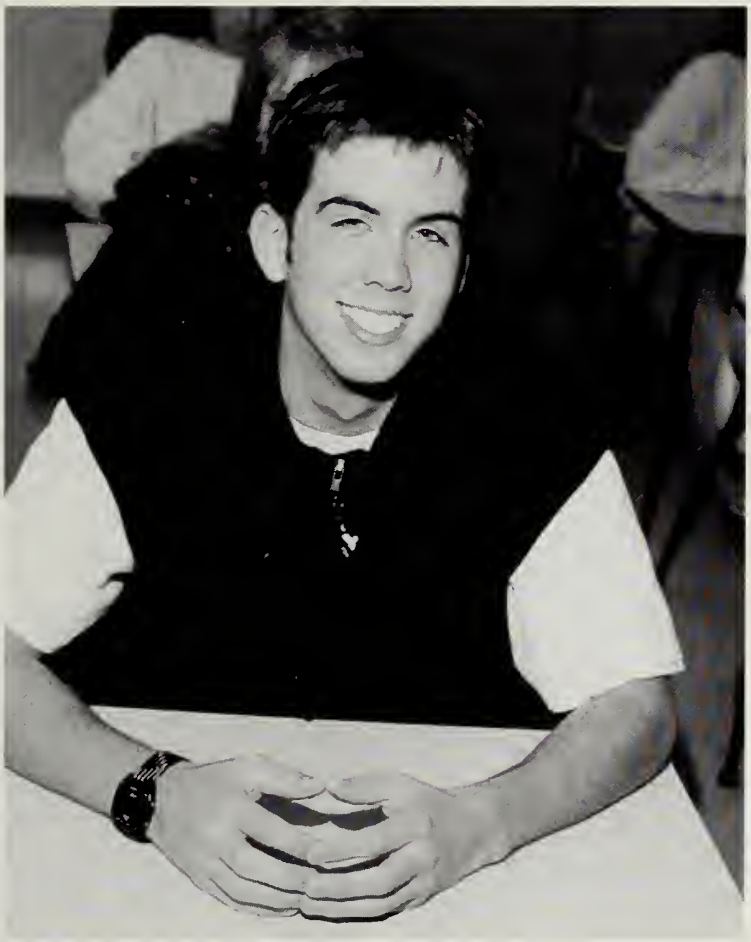
"Look out down below," screams Nick Terizzi as he bombards his target.

"Seniors should get to use the elevator!" proclaim Nick Terizzi and Myrte Oosthuizen, tired from a downhill trek.

Serving their customers in style, Kathryn McGee and Suzanne Gendrolius are all decked all out for the mystery dinner.

Showing his speed reading abilities, Aaron Gouveia absorbs a wealth of information.





"Who says dog is man's best friend?" questions Andy Scarpetti as he admires his pet frog.

After completing an excellent play, Tom Ross gives high fives all around.

"Maybe if I smile they'll put me on the cover of 'Vogue'," thinks Jason Pierce in hopes of hitting it big.

"Applications, deadlines, scholarships, doesn't the cycle ever end?" questions Tanya Collins in amazement.

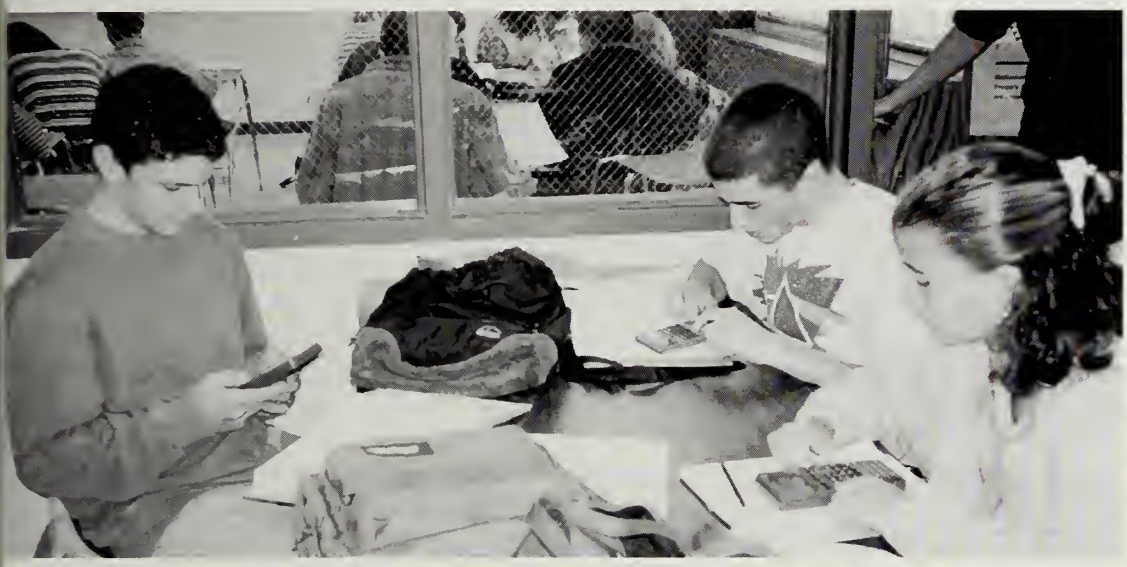
Jessica Carrier attempts to find out just how many licks it takes to get to the center of a Tootsie Roll pop.

Keeping his eyes on the teacher, Matt Bogosh keeps his ears open for the bell.

Trying to convince Amy Zawislak to have some, Monica Hubbell proclaims, "Cotton candy....finger lickin' good."

"Don't worry Jen Janczunski, I'll protect you!" proclaims Kevin Buckley, promising to save the world from a computer virus.

Todd Casagni, Tony Silvia, and Kristen Sisto search their calculator screens for the answers to life's perplexing questions.



Magically, this mysterious woman casts her spell over Steve Reardon and Donnie Dumont.

"Follow us," proclaim Maura Kirrane and Todd Kefor trying to instruct their assistant Donnie Dumont in the fine art of eating.

As INCA SON keeps the beat, these N.H.S. students display how the 'Macarena' is really done.

Over time, memories of the past slowly fade as faces and names are slowly forgotten. A picture is a small piece of history that cannot be destoyed by time. With it, memories of special people and occasions can come to life again. Photos are not simply pieces of paper with images but timeless reminders of the experiences in life. Upon looking at pictures, a person's heart and mind are flooded with emotions. Families and friends keep these memories alive by passing pictures on from one generation to the next. Pictures evoke laughter, sorrow, and sometimes tears, but always bring forth the feeling of wanting to recapture the precious moments of the past.

The Class of 1997 recaptured its school years through group photos taken in the eighth grade and again during senior year. In these photos, students that were new to the class were positioned in the front row, while spaces were left throughout the pictures to represent missing students. All other students were placed in the exact spots they stood during eighth grade. These pictures assured the Class of 1997 that the memories of high school, and well before, would not be forgotten.

Cooking up a Storm

It was a grey and chilly day that greeted the class of 1997 as its members ventured out to the annual senior barbecue. Escaping from classes early, the group dashed outside to enjoy the festivities prepared by the advisors and the class officers. The lines quickly formed for hamburgers and hot dogs as chattering students snapped pictures and walked about with their friends. However, just as everyone finished eating and the touch football game began, threatening clouds overhead opened up, forcing the unsuspecting seniors to run for cover. Refusing to let a little rain ruin their celebration, the members of the senior class, as well as their advisors, found shelter in the gym. It was in this haven that the students finished their slightly soggy snacks and exchanged footballs for volleyballs, starting another action packed competition. Despite Mother Nature's intentions of spoiling the fun, the senior barbecue was a worthwhile adventure filled with games, sports, great food, and most of all, laughter.

"Togetherness is the virtue of all things," declares Jas Pierce along with his close knit teammat

Trying to guard her food from oncoming predators, Kendra Sands declares, "I've got ketchup, and I'm not afraid to use it."

After a salute to friendship, Tom Ross admires Shane McCauley's speed-eating skills.

A wide range of faces and expressions gather together for an afternoon of barbecuing, games, and music.

"Your wish is my command," says David McNeil to master of barbecuing Mark Parker.

"This means war!" announces Krisha Suydan as she reveals her ammunition.

Capturing the coveted orange, this group of seniors basks in the glory of sweet victory.

Forgetting their juicer at home, Eric Myers and Nick Terrizzi find an alternative way to create their favorite beverage.

For Our Future

So now it begins
Life, I mean

To which corners of the Earth
Will we be swept?
Now, we cannot predict
The changes we will face,
The obstacles we will overcome,
Or the lives we will make.
But, we will never forget
From where we have come.

Life is our adventure
Waiting to happen.

What truths lay beyond the teachings
Of the past four years?
Here, we cannot find
The answers to all questions,
The keys to all puzzles,
Or the secrets of life.
But, we will search out those things
And find our new beginnings.

Life awaits us.
We need only to leap.

— Rebecca Bischoff

Life in Progress

Step aboard the yellow space craft and prepare for an exciting adventure. Arrival at our destination, Norton High School, is 7:25 A.M. The first stop on our tour is the main hall. Watch carefully as the students hurry off to class with faces hidden by books and backs breaking from overloaded backpacks. The students of N.H.S. are famous for this type of balancing act. Moving to the classroom, we witness the students' brains in action. Problems are solved, poems are written, and computer programs are installed. Throughout this whole process, each student is waiting, planning, dreaming, and thinking about the upcoming weekend and the free time he can take advantage of. However, the students must buckle down and do their best to concentrate on the tasks at hand. After a much deserved lunch, they are off for more reading, writing, and arithmetic. Smiles soon become frowns as the homework continues to mount. Their memory banks filled with knowledge, the students head for home, activities, or work. With these hectic schedules, the students of N.H.S. make a strong attempt to balance their busy lives. Well, we are on a schedule as well. I'm sorry to say that our time on this planet has come to an end. Hopefully you enjoyed your day here at Norton High School, and will come and visit again.

As Susan Mackey does her spring cleaning, Hayley Devine keeps her distance, not knowing what might pop out next.

"Questions, questions everywhere, but not an answer in sight," think Caroline Kirby and Patrick Malloy as they scan their minds for facts and figures.

Upon seeing Ed McMahon enter the room, Emily Larocque realizes that she could be the next $10,000,000 winner.

In between math problems, Kenny Palin practices his song and dance number for his upcoming hit show on broadway.

"Every masterpiece has to start somewhere," screams Suzanne Gendrolius defending her moon rock.

"Notebook? Pencil? Book? Aren't you forgetting something?" asks Nadine Beede-Maynes of Shanna Cullinane.

Having a little too much time on his hands, Troy Almeida tries his luck at origami.

Standing back and admiring her modern art, thoughts start dancing through Vanessa McGee's mind, "I could be the next Picasso."

Time and a Half

Much of a student's life is absorbed by academic demands, extracurricular activities, and social events. Nevertheless, a number of Norton High School students manage to sqeeze a job into their busy schedules. They take on various tasks; they make and serve food, babysit, or care for senior citizens. Bravely venturing into the world of employment, the students gain experience while acquiring a unique sense of responsibility and a small taste of independence. Undoubtedly, this work experience is excellent preparation for the future. It gives the students an idea of what life will be like after high school. Perhaps nothing, though, is savored as are the anxiously anticipated weekly earnings that go toward CDs, clothing, movie tickets, car payments, and college educations. Also, the students begin to realize the value of a dollar by having to manage their finances by themselves. They continually learn more about the hassels and high points of the workplace, and also about themselves. Through their determination and hard work, many Norton High School students are able to successfully juggle school, friends, family, and a job.

A Different Beat

The Norton Lancer Marching Band came out to play at the annual band banquet held at the Norton Country Club. Excited to finally let loose after a long marching band season, the bandoes were there for more than roasted chicken and green beans almondane. Lights, Limbo, and "the lobster" are what they had in mind.

When the last dish of mud pie ice cream had been eaten, it was time to hand out the awards. As Ms. Remick took the podium everyone stirred in their seats waiting to accept their certificates. After the colorguard and majorettes received their awards, the time had come to distribute the band jackets.

Next on the agenda was the traditional "Ode to the Band" performed by drum majors Mellissa Betts and Beck Anufrom. Their entertaining version of "Come Out and Play" included the name of each band member, and through its ridiculous humor, set the tone for the evening.

Without further adieu, the rest of the party began as many of the bandoes introduced themselves to the dance floor. The lights flashed and the speakers blared as the tame and wild stepped in time to the Marcarena, the Electric Slide, and the Choo-Choo. As they dance up, down, and especially under during the limbo contest, those not participating looked on intently.

All the fun and games came to a grinding halt when the first winter storm of the year caused the electricity to suddenly shut off. Unfortunately the evening of excitement had to end early, but to the 1996 Lancer Marching Band it will always be remembered as the night the lights went out in Norton.

Mastering the art of hand shaking, Krisha Suydan gets plenty of practice as she makes her way down the receiving line.

Either in awe of the Lincoln Memorial or numbed by the lack of sleep, members of the honor societies roam around Washington in a trance-like state.

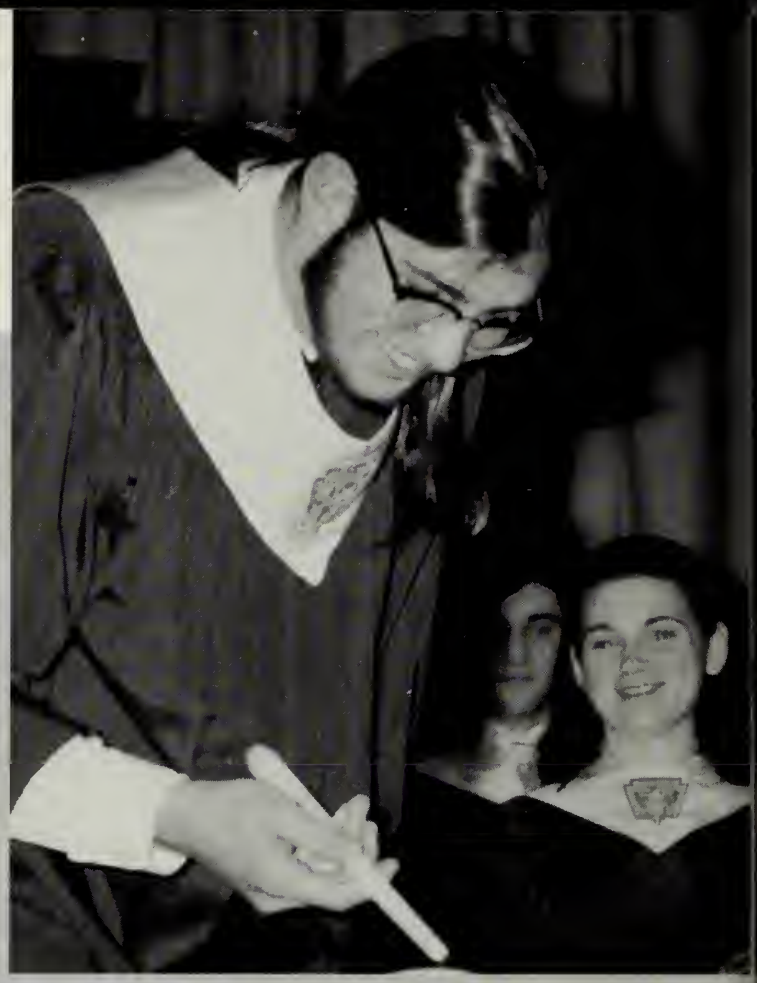
Sleepless in D.C.

With the presidential election finally over and President Clinton seated comfortably in the White House, the Norton High School honor societies departed Massachusetts for the nation's capital. Facing a seven hour drive, the members of the combined societies settled into their cramped seats with pillows and blankets and hoped that they would fall asleep. After seven sleepless hours and numerous stops at fast food restaurants, the group found itself at the Lincoln Memorial. Its lifelike quality and magnificent construction made everyone gaze in amazement. As the sun rose, they ventured towards the Washington Monument and the Vietnam Memorial Wall. The presence of wreaths and banners at the wall made each member of the societies aware of the significance of the monument. After a quick photo stop at the White House, the group set off once again on foot towards their next destination. The "Mall" was the perfect place for them to rest their tired feet and explore the numerous museums along this long walkway. Some chose the Air and Space Museum while others admired the life forms and gems of the Museum of Natural History. Each museum offered new knowledge of the nation's history. When all of the museums were toured and the group's feet were completely worn out, the societies piled back onto the bus and headed for home. Throughout the long route back to N.H.S., heads were cluttered with thoughts of the day that passed. When they arrived home, the members gathered up all their belongings in anticipation of one thing: the warm comfort of their beds.

Reaching Higher

Every school year, a select number of noteworthy students were rewarded for their excellence in academics, journalism, art, and language. With the arrival of spring, sixteen new students received the invitation to the 1996 honor society induction ceremony. As the auditorium filled for the occasion, Master of Ceremonies Christy Hinchey welcomed the guests. The inductees then marched in as the band expressed the evening's theme in their selection, "Chariots of Fire." Those robed in blue accepted the National Honor Society oath given by Ms. Carney . As green candles burned, the inductees of the Art Honor Society were recognized for their creativity. This being a special year for the Spanish Honor Society, the inductees received acknowledgements from Mr. Maher in his last year as advisor. In conclusion of the 1996 induction ceremony, the new members of the Quill & Scroll Honor Society were given credit for their literary excellence.

As the new year rolled around, changes in the inductions traditions were evident. Unlike the previous years when the inductions were held in the spring, the inductions this year were held in the fall. Craig Wencis, this year's Master of Ceremonies, introduced this year's four honor societies. In addition to the processional march played by the band, members of Spanish Honor Society and chorus sang the theme song "Peudes Llegar". This phrase, meaning "to reach higher," was the centralized theme of the evening. Whether it was maintaining a grade point average, being successful as an artist, or possessing language and literary skills, the new members of the honor societies at Norton High School proved that they were not afraid to reach for the sky.



"Burn baby burn," pleads Michael Sirois as Christine Hogan waits to place his candle.

Equipped with flaming candles, Rhiannon Kirby and Brian Curran take a final depth in preparation of their big moment.

As the mother candle performs its disappearing flame act, Mike Mohan and Marcy Wagner are thoroughly entertained

"Creativity, talent, and honor..." declares Samantha Miller as she gives the charge of the Art Honor Society.

Fearing that she will extinguish the burning flame, Becca Bischoff holds her breath as she mounts her candle.

"Yes, we do," reply the three amigos, Troy Almeida, Josh O'Connell, and Jeff Kaminski in response to the oath.

As her moment in the spotlight approaches, Jill Murphy reminds herself to do one important thing...breath.

Starry Skies and Dragonflies

An evening of excitement lay ahead for the students of Norton High School, for it was the night of the 1996 Homecoming Semi Formal. As flowers were exchanged and pinned, the joyful anticipation of this magical evening escalated with each passing moment. Demetri's Banquet Hall, which was majestically decorated, captivated the couples as they arrived. Each duo searched for their assigned tables and observed the elegant atmosphere that was prepared. After the commotion of finding tables was through, it was quickly followed up by the rush of picture taking. Once all technicalities were taken care of, the partygoers hurried to their seats just in time to be served their meals. Lulled by soft dining music, the conversations during dinner flowed easily and brightly between tables. As soon as the meals were finished, it was time for the bright eyed couples to take their places on the dance floor. Whether it was an up beat hit, or a slow but agreeable tune, those on the floor shined like the stars. Shortly after the first music set, each couple took their seats as the king, the queen, and the court were announced. King Nick Sbardella and Queen Nicole Greene swayed to an enchanting melody as the remainder of the court joined for the finish. Once again in the music mode, each excited individual regained his or her place on the floor. Fading to its end, the 1996 Homecoming Semi Formal, an evening of "starry skies and dragonflies," provided the students of Norton High School with an eventful night that will never vanish from their hearts.

Anxiously anticipating an evening of excitement, Colleen Belmonte's smile lights up the entire room.

"Come on everybody, do the 'Sara'," proclaims Sara Brundelle in an effort to start a new dance craze.

"I'll Stand By You"

"I'll stand by you . . . won't let nobody hurt you, I'll stand by you . . .". The song fades and couples slowly blink out of the spell set by the meaningful song. Their aching heels and drooping hair remind them that the last song of the evening has ended. Time begins to tick again, and everyone heads for home.

Few moment in one's life could be compared to the Junior/Senior Prom. Held at Christo's II in Brockton, the '96 Prom proved to be a memory capable of lasting the test of time in the hearts and minds of all who attended. Putting academics aside and hanging up sports uniforms for tuxedos and sequin covered dresses, the Norton High School students anxiously prepared for such a special evening. With little reluctancy, the students of N.H.S. entered the reception where the feeling of excitement was already crackling in the air. They all marveled at the sight of the beautiful surroundings; tables were decorated with bouqets of flowers and a single candle representing the night of endless excitement. The overwhelming enthusiasm seemed to take over as the couples found their tables and their friends. Clustered in groups, they took numerous rolls of pictures, complemented each other on hair and attire, and shared their anxious emotions. A delicious dinner was enjoyed by all, followed by a tremendous amount of dancing. The newest dance craze, the Macarena, was performed on the dance floor as well as many other upbeat grooves. To most of those at the Prom, the long awaited night took only an instant to pass. However, that instant was one that will last a lifetime in the memories of all who took part.

If these Walls Could Talk

The gym was bursting with color and energy as the students of N.H.S. filed in to support their football team. They were greeted by the buzz of excitement that filled the gym as last minute preparations were made for the 1996 Pep Rally. The evening got off to a colorful start when the band performed their lively field show routine. Even as the flags and majorettes left the floor, the music still echoed. The excitement continued when the cheerleaders performed to "Twist and Shout." With spirits running high, the crowd clapped, whistled, and screamed as the judging of the class walls began. Although a three way tie resulted, the junior's wall, serving as the backdrop to the class' humorous skit "Hot to Trot," stood out from the rest. As the leftovers from the juniors' wall was cleared from the floor, a single rope was positioned for "The Battle." Surprisingly, the auxiliaries won this part of the competition. As they ran clapping and screaming into the stands, all prepared for the announcement of the Homecoming Court. After the name of each girl was called, the cheerleaders gave the new court a royal welcome. With all the festivities coming to an end, everyone headed for home to recover from the climactic night and dream of Homecoming victory.

"Row, row, row your boat," sings Joey Habersack as she paddles her way through her Pep Rally routine.

Opting for the unconventional form of tug of war, Meredith McDowell laughs her way through floor burn.

"Fancy meeting you here," proclaims Tara Piccini to her royal escort.

"Please don't let me drop this toss," thinks Laurie Bishop as she realized the magnitude of this moment.

In the heat of a cardboard duel, Corey Bachand and Mike Mohan defend their kingdoms from evil.

Without a Moment's Rest

Yearbook
One Day at a Time

Far, far, away in a world called yearbook lived a small group of devoted Norton High School students. Along with their advisor Miss Archibald and business manager Mrs. Moynihan, the members of Sojourn '97 struggled continuously to meet their deadlines and create 176 pages of worthwhile memories. Whether it was a frozen computer or a tempermental body copy, there was almost always something to keep the staff busy well passed the school dismissal bell. Layout by layout, caption by caption, day by day, the group trekked over foreign, sometimes dangerous, terrain. As pictures were taken to capture the special moments, copy was written to grasp the students' thoughts. All the while, ads were sold and fundraisers were held to fund the Sojourn staff's daring adventrue. Although the group of brave students was minimal in number, it was saturated with determination, effort, and devotion. Sacrificing every afternoon and evening to produce the yearbook they desired, the yearbook staff rarely saw the outside of the school building during daylight. Even after their duties were over, their hours of homework were still ahead of them. Nevertheless, every last folio art was set, all ad pages were designed, and each picture was carefully cropped. In this distant land called yearbook, life was...undefinable.

A quiet atmosphere relaxes Mellissa Betts as she reviews her copy.

"Whistle while you work," sings Amy Robinson trying to keep herself amused while performing yet another yearbook task.

National Honor Society

Lighting the Way

To become a member of the Jean G. Findlater chapter of the National Honor Society, one must have the qualities of character, leadership, service, and scholarship. Under the direction of advisor Mrs. Robbins and president Heather Bramwell, the society exemplified all of these qualities. Serving the school while bringing a touch of color to the halls, the society sold spirit balloons to raise money for scholarships. Meeting after school, the group remained well into the evening blowing up balloons, tying them together, and preparing them for distribution. The members served their fellow students by tutoring during free periods or after school. Their work extended outside of school through their various community activities. To help local charities ring in the new year, the society organized a can drive to aid the Norton Santa Fund Food Drive. This year 63 families were provided with food baskets valued at $125.00. In addition to this worthwhile effort, the society organized the annual College Day where former N.H.S. students returned and told of their college experiences, the Bike-a-thon, an event where each honor society member braved a ten mile bike route, and inductions, the ceremony in which new members were welcomed into the society. Even with these projects, the members of the National Honor Society were still capable of keeping their grades up and participating in numerous extra-curricular activities.

Art Honor Society
True Colors

It was the best of years, it was the most colorful of years, it was the age of painting, it was the age of drawing. No matter what year, the members of the Art Honor Society always made N.H.S. a much brighter and colorful place. Under the direction of advisor Mrs. Gagnon and led by president Russanne Goos, this year's society took on many projects. Attempting to liven up the classrooms, the members of the society decorated hundreds of Halloween pumpkins, some with pictures of Disney characters, others with scary faces. In addition to this, they also created masterpieces in windows of local shops and businesses. Helping out a fellow society, the art students covered boxes for the National Honor Society during the can drive. Through all of the hard work, the society still found the time to have a "Chase Away the Winter Blues" dinner, an event where all of the members enjoyed a peaceful, worry-free evening. Whether decorating the school walls or creating humorous pumpkins, the Art Honor Society always made N.H.S. a much brighter, more colorful place to be.

Spanish Honor Society
Un Momento, Por Favor

The red flame still burned long after the oath had been given. It stood as a reminder of the dedication the Alonso Quijana Chapter of the Spanish Honor Society had to the Spanish language and culture. The society continued to go above and beyond their expectations under the direction of new advisor Sra. Titmas. With her support, the society took on the task of sponsoring a young boy in Ecuador named Luis. This was followed by "Warmth for Winter," a clothes drive during which the students collected shoes, jackets, scarves, and other items for local Hispanic charities. They soon learned though, that after finishing all of their hard work, there was time for fun. The group ventured out to see various plays and dances, and occasionally got a taste of fine Spanish cuisine. Through these excursions, much was learned about Spanish culture and ideas, helping the students learn a valuable lesson. They discovered that the Spanish world consisted of more than words in a textbook or an encyclopedia. Traditions of hispanic countries could actually be tasted, smelt, heard, seen, and felt. This new knowledge gave the Spanish Honor Society the ability to continue its study of Spanish culture and broaden its international horizons.

Quill and Scroll
Words of Wisdom

The members of the Grace B. Kiernan chapter of the Quill and Scroll Honor Society were recognized for their outstanding work in literary publications. Through endless hours of writing copy, drawing layouts, and editing, these students showed their excellence in the area of journalism. The group displayed another form of creativity by maintaining the bulletin board in the English wing. This board advertised national writing contests and other literary awards. This year's society exemplified the meaning of hard work. Heather Bramwell made her mark on the society as Editor-in-Chief of Sojourn '97, while Sarah Yukna held the same position on Local Colour with the help of fellow society member Leana Weston. Joey Habersack, Amy Robinson, and Heidi Bramwell, all editors on Sojourn '97, were also member of the society. With all of their dedication, and the power of the written word, the members of the Quill and Scroll Honor Society left lasting marks on N.H.S.

Marching Band
Time Warp

It was 8' o' clock on a September Saturday morning, and the members of the Norton Lancer Marching Band knew they had somewhere important to be: field show rehearsal. Despite the freezing temperatures and drizzling rain, the bandoes rushed to their lines waiting for the call to "attention." Knowing that they had four hours of playing and twirling ahead of them, each member showed his or her enthusiasm with a thunderous "hut". Under the instruction of their drum majors Beck Anufrom and Mellissa Betts and guided by new band director Ms. Remick, the freshmen bandoes stared an unforgettable season in July. Shortly after freshmen training came to an end, the entire Lancer Band united for the long awaited August band camp. The sun, more scorching than the month before, beat on their faces as beads of perspiration formed on their foreheads. These rehearsals continued throughout the end of the summer into the school year. Although it became tedious at times, all the hard work and endless practice paid off. With the guidance of their captains, the auxiliaries added color and grace to the show stopping performances of "Come Out and Play," "The Time Warp," and "The Orange County Lumber Truck." Along with the crowd pleasing field show, the Lancer Band managed to bring home three trophies from the Quincy Christmas Parade. The band's successes made it quite evident that hard work and extra practice did pay off.

Chorus
Perfect Harmony

Singing was never a simple activity. It required much more than opening one's mouth and singing in tune. This complex activity called for the singer to take the necessary steps to attain musical excellence. Just as an athlete follows a specific routine before a big game, every member of the Norton High School chorus had to prepare for performances. Along with stretching their diaphragms, the singers needed to warm up their vocal chords in order to turn ordinary air into a beautiful tune. Many vocal exercises, such as singing The Three Stooges theme song, seemed rather silly but proved to be quite beneficial. This year, under the direction of Mr. Giessow, the chorus expanded its musical horizons by performing a wide range of songs including Latin pieces as well as popular dance songs from the 1950's. Contributing more than their voices to the chorus, Kerryn Frazier and Mellissa Betts provided piano accompaniment for the holiday and spring concerts. Beyond participating in the concerts, some members had the courage and initiative to audition for District Chorus and SEMSBA. No matter where the members of chorus were singing, however, they always used the skills and techniques they learned at N.H.S and proved that all of their practicing was well worth the time and effort.

Newspaper
Keeping with the Times

Putting out a newspaper was not an easy task. Yet somehow, the staff of Norton High School's publication, The Lance, managed to do just fine. Even with the stresses of a literary publication, the staff continuously created an informational yet entertaining paper. A dedicated staff advised by Mrs. Honey, the group put forth a great amount of time and energy to meet their deadlines. Collectively, they wrote movie and music reviews, sports highlights, and student interest articles such as "UMass Band Day" and "No Censorship". The newspaper staff presented a new edition of The Lance every other month, providing students and teachers alike with useful information. By selling and printing personal ads from the students, the staff continued a lasting fund raising tradition. Through this fundraiser, extra money was brought in and a unique touch was added to the paper. Thanks to this group of young journalists, The Lance became the voice of N.H.S. as well as a true publication.

Local Colour
Creative Collage

As piles of art work, poems, essays, and short stories poured in, the staff of Local Colour began the long process of putting together a literary publication. Trying to adhere to the theme "Black, White, & Shades of Grey," the staff read carefully over every piece of work, voting for its favorites. When a piece was chosen, it had to follow the tedious path of being categorized, edited, and typed, a process which required dedication and patience on behalf of the reading staff. The staff followed a similar process with the artwork, providing all needed illustrations. One of the most difficult jobs they faced was choosing the perfect cover. The staff searched endlessly for the one drawing which best represented the theme and was pleasing to the eye. After this critical decision was made, each piece was thoroughly examined one last time for spelling, content, and quality. Every page, word, and letter had to be carefully looked over to ensure perfection. With this last step, all of the staff's work was completed, but the effects of the literary magazine were long lasting. Whether black, white, or a shade of grey, each piece of work present in the magazine sent a message to those of N.H.S.

Student Council
Children of Democracy

Just as the population of the United States voted for representatives, senators, and a president, the student body of Norton High School was able to elect the Student Council. This year, Student Council advisor Mr. Gorman received many nomination papers from certain motivated students. These students realized that being elected meant taking on a great deal of responsibility but were ready for the challenge. This enormous challenge was placed on the shoulders of Craig Wencis, the student's choice for student council president. Through his excellent leadership, the council organized the Santa Fund, an event where each class deposited its spare pennies in buckets stationed in the cafeteria. The members were also helpful in organizing the Semi-Formal and Prom. This select group of political minds made many important decisions concerning the good of the school. The Student Council certainly performed well this year with its outstanding officers and refined leadership skills.

Drama
Lights, Camera, Action!

No none ever said that putting on a Broadway musical for your high school was an easy task. The new Norton High School Drama Club discovered this soon after the arrival of their drama director Miss Humphries. For the students, having another club focusing on the arts could not have been more of a thrill. Not only could they play in the band, sing in the chorus, or create colorful masterpieces, this new addition opened the door to the world of drama.

Though the Norton High School auditorium didn't measure up to that of a Broadway stage, many of the members successfully strutted their stuff as they "followed the yellow brick road" during outstanding 1996 performance of The Wiz. As melodic voices told the story and rhythmic dancers filled the stage, the audience viewed the production with satisfaction and pride.

The Norton High School Drama Club strived for a goal that seemed impossible to accomplish in one short year. To the disappointment of none, the members, dedicated to giving the public a performance they'd never forget, successfully reached for the stars.

Continuing to bring arts to the school throughout 1997, the drama club, under the direction of Mrs. Gouveia, revealed its talents through several one-act plays and a medley of Broadway Musical hits.

Throughout the passed two years, students interested in acting, as well as singing and dancing, found a place in the drama club. It was their hard work, creativity, and courage that helped shape the arts at Norton High School in 1996 and 1997.

Science Olymiad
Beyond Space and Time

"Science is Knowledge." A quote such as this would be an appropriate slogan for the 1996-1997 Norton High School Science Olympiad team. Measuring pH, following a map, or converting inches to meters, may sound challenging to many, but this squad had such tasks down to a science! Achieving the scientific excellence necessary for their monthly competitions demanded continual training. Equipped with safety goggles and medicine droppers, the members often approached their advisor Miss Brennan for guidance as they prepared for the upcoming meets. Some events, such as bridge building and bottle rockets, actually required a previously constructed project. The team also practiced experimental labs in the area of chemistry, biology, and physics. After all training was completed, it was time for the members to apply their knowledge as they traveled to other schools for competition. Upon their arrival, each group took its place in its designated team room. With little time to spare, all members then proceeded to their assigned events. For many, the day consisted of written labs full of formulas and theorems. Others were given the opportunity to explore agriculture and animals. Whether it was studying rocks or graphing a specific brain size, those on the Norton Science Olympiad team not only received cookies or medals for their work, but also the chance to tap into the World of Science!

Math Team
It All Adds Up

After most people leave math class, they try not to think about this often confusing subject for the rest of the day. Not the Math Team! These problem solving machines spent free time going over arithmetic, algebra, geometry, and other mathematic topics in preparation for their monthly meets. Under the supervision of their enthusiastic advisors Mr. Boutell and Mr. Carter, the Math Team joined together every month to take NEML tests. These New England Math League exams consisted of six complex questions testing the students in the areas of mathematics covered by the league, and were just one means of practice for the team's monthly competitions against area schools. Huddled together in corners of the room, the members examined each problem carefully before the meets. With this added preparation, the members of this team performed superbly in the heat of competition. Whether adding simple numbers, finding the angles of a triangle, or getting to the bottom of a word problem, the Norton High School Math Team always proved to be a successful unit.

Pep Club
With Spirit in Mind

With a spring in their steps and spirit on their minds, the members of the N. H. S. Pep Club set out to spread their enthusiasm throughout the school. This group of energized girls, led by advisor Mrs. Sicard and president Kendra Sands, worked their hardest to lift the spirits of everyone at N. H. S.. Besides making posters in support of the sports teams, the club organized the ultimate spirit booster, the Pep Rally. Working daily, the group planned numerous events and activities for the big night. Decorating the walls with bright posters and streamers, the members advertised "The Battle", a competition between extra-curricular activities. The girls organized the schedule of events, including the tug of war and the "Macarena" competition. Besides the rally, the group also organized Spirit Week, which consisted of flannel pajama day, inside-out day, purple and white day, and the ever humorous boy and girl hush days. The activities the Pep Club planned this year were aimed at beringing some extra enthusiasm to N. H. S.

Debate Team
Matters of Opinions

With few members but strong voices, the Debate Team worked diligently to improve its debating skills this year. Even though they did not participate in organized meets, the members, led by advisor Ms. Mackinder, held intramural competitions amongst themselves. They heavily researched current events and views held by the leaders of the day to help support their stands on specific issues. Then they brought all of these ideas to the table and held heated discussions. Sometimes reaching an absolute deadlock, a victory was won with one small fact or figure. Without a doubt, this extra practice in speech, and knowledge from endless research gave the Debate Team just the boost they needed for future years.

Greenpeace
Peace on Earth

With help and support from students and teachers, Greenpeace became one of the largest and most productive extra curricular activities at Norton High School. This enormous group of students, advised by Mr. Bartek, combined its efforts to successfully instill the "Reduce, Reuse, Recycle" motto into N.H.S. students. By sorting through mountains of paper, computer paper edges, and other recycleable materials, the group reorganized while helping the planet. The members were responsible for their rooms where they collected boxes of extra paper every week. These boxes were then transported to the recycling room to be sorted. Each piece of paper had to be carefully inspected for staples, tape, crayon, and all other non-recycleable materials. Then, the tedious task of packing up the mountains of white, colored, and computer paper that blanketed the recycling room floor, had to be completed. This task in itself took hours, not to mention the added time needed for cleaning up the room after the paper was shipped away. With all bins emptied, and the floor finally visible, Greenpeace closed up shop for the summer, knowing all of this work would start all over again next year.

Amnesty International
Spanning the Globe

With pen in hand and heavy hearts, the members of Amnesty International worked tirelessly to make a difference in the world. Advised by Mr. Bartek, the group wrote letters in response to Urgent Action Bulletins, which notified the students of the torture, murder, and execution of wrongly accused individuals throughout the world. With the help of president Marybeth Yorke, the group printed up dozens of letters and circulated among students working to get the needed number of signatures. After this task was completed, the letters were mailed to the leaders and governments of various countries where the injustices were taking place. To raise money for stamps to pay for the numerous letters, and to send members as representatives to Amnesty meetings held in Boston, the group also held a bake sale during parent teacher conferences. The group continuously worked to make a difference in the world, hoping that maybe all of their efforts would prove worthwhile and eventually would prevail.

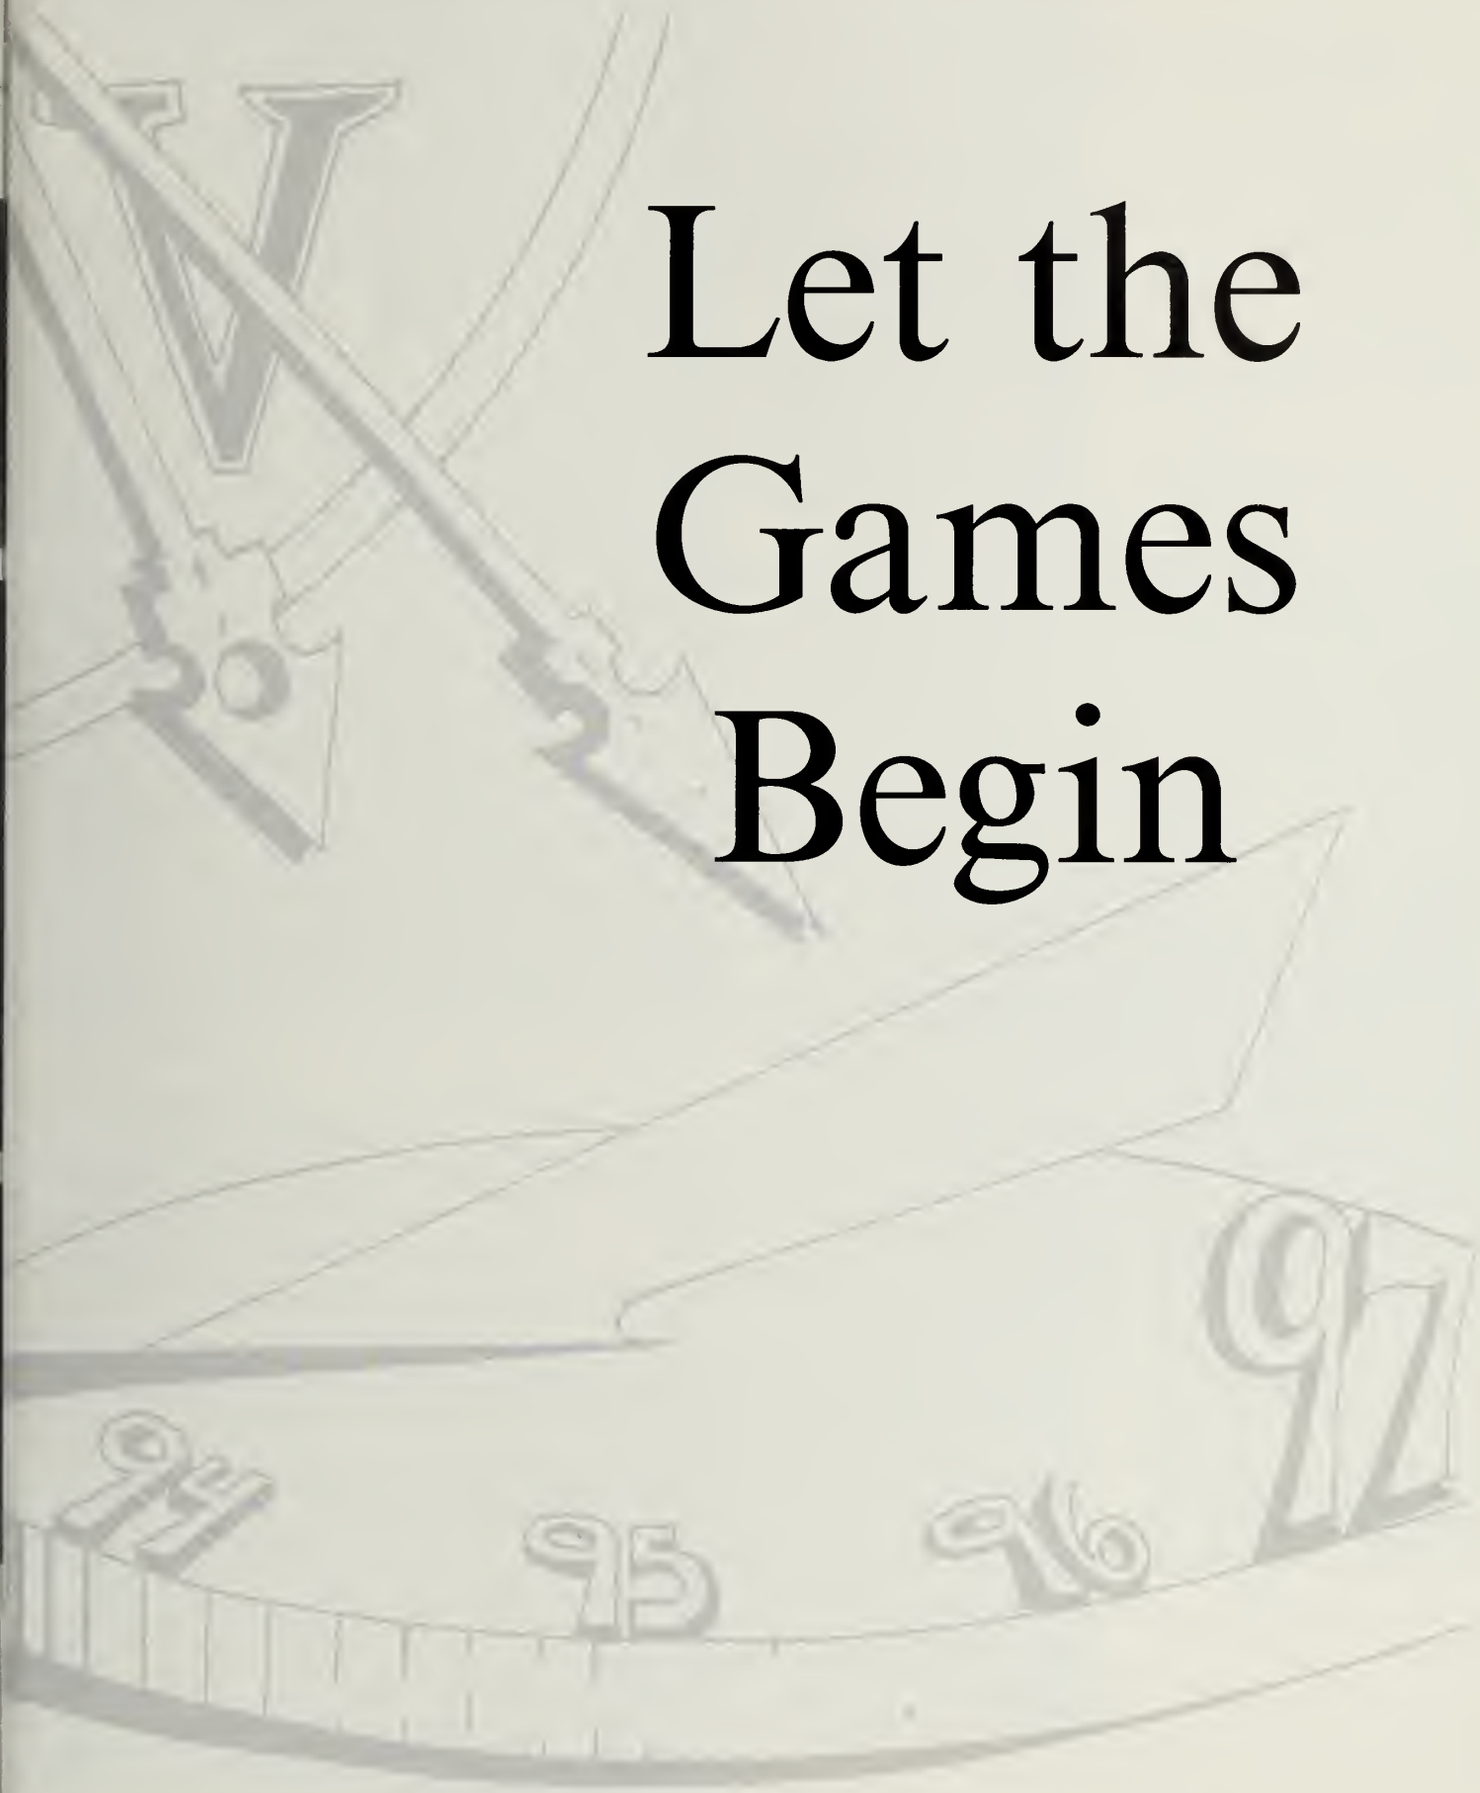
Let the Games Begin



Passing the Time

Led by long time coaches Larry Larocque and Keith Gibson, the N.H.S. football team fought valiantly through another tough season. They began the year by breaking a fifteen game losing streak. The confidence that the players gained from this breakthrough was enhanced by the stand-out play of co-captains Brian Curran and Eric Myers. The team remained strong behind senior running back Shane McCauley and Craig Wencis. On the defensive end, the players were led by Tom Ross and Rich Childs, whose strong presence was immediately felt once they stepped onto the field. All of these players worked diligently to overcome the numerous injuries which plagued some of their key starters. The Lancers always kept their spirits up when faced with adversity. The true dedication that the players had to football and to the school was what pushed them through the bad times and into a promising future.

Picking up the Pace

While many people thought running four miles during the freezing winter months was out of the question, the members of Norton High School 's winter track teams knew it was only part of the game. Both the girls and the boys track teams spent many hours each day preparing for their events. Among them were the high jump, the shot put, and the 55 yard hurdles. Guided by their coach Mike Smith, the boys winter track team members tolerated the cold weather and sore legs in return for endurance and a successful season. For Chris Henson, Josh Jardin, and Mike Young, extra effort was rewarding when they qualified for the state finals. With a hop, skip, and a jump, the girls winter track team, under the supervision of their coach Mark Hudson, expressed dedication and determination throughout the season. Qualifying for the state finals, Heidi Dessert contributed enthusiasm as well as high scores. With outstanding results such as these, and overall team spirit and effort, both teams soared to success. Despite the freezing winter days and the occasional pulled muscle, the members of the1996-1997 Norton Lancer winter track teams found what it means to give 100%.

Lasting the Duration

Having one of its best seasons in years, the 1996 N. H.S. Cross Country team made a great impact on the South Shore League. Led by coach Robert Rukstalis and captain Troy Almeida, the team spent hours preparing for this exhausting , sometimes overwhelming, sport. Seniors Chris Henson and Aaron Gouveia showed their great endurance by running the excrutiating 2.1 mile course. However, the team's strength came from their younger runners. Corey Bachand, Sean Fontain, and Paul Ravinski made their teammates cheer by consistently finishing at the head of the pack. Constantly placing first in competition, Josh Jardin was the team's standout. He was also the first Norton runner in history to be nominated to the All State Meet. Through hours of practice and endless miles of running, the members of the cross country team never surrendered. Instead, they raised their heads high and sprinted towards the finish line, showing that they had the strength and endurance to win.

Shooting Stars

"...and the home of the brave." This phrase symbolized the beginning of the Norton High School basketball game. Fans stood up, stomped their feet, and clapped their hands as the boys' and girls' basketball teams jogged onto the floor. Leading the boys onto the court was coach Greg Rooslet, who in only his second year, made great strides with his team. From the other entrance appeared girls' coach Dave Mollica, whose coaching experience was a major key to the team's success. Most of the eyes, however, were focused on the players who were warming up. Energized and ready for fierce competition were boys' captains Craig Wencis and Eric Myers, both leading scorers for the offense. Their female counterparts, Maura Kirrane and Lorie Navedo, prepared their fellow team members with a quick pep talk. As the shot clock ticked the girls' and boys' basketball teams continued to improve their skills and their overall play. Never surrendering, the teams excelled in big games such as the boys' fight for first place. No matter what the situation, the basketball teams continued to play heads up defense and produced unbelievable offensive statistics. Thanks to excellent coaching and outstanding leadership, the Lancer basketball teams shocked the competition and made N.H.S proud.

The Great American Pastime

Each player on the Lancer softball and baseball teams stepped up to the plate with visions of victory for 1996. Led by coaches Dave Mollica and Keith Gibson, both teams marched on to the state tournament. The boys rose to the occasion and ended the season with a record of 18-5 . Craig Wencis, the shimmering star at second base, boosted the team with his outstanding batting and defensive technique. Fellow baseman Jeremy Winters helped construct the bridge to success with his quick thinking at first base. Another alert player, Adam Pellerin, made many crucial saves while catching at home plate. The girls also had a successful season, leaving the field with a tremendous record of 15-7. Motivated by their hunger for victory, the girls climbed their way to the semi-finals. Pitchers Nicole Green and Missy Davis used their precision pitching to keep opposing teams from reaching home. On the offense, Marcy Wagner had an excellent season at the plate, leading the team in slugging percentage, while Lorie Navedo and Maura Kirrane used their veteran ability to propel their team to victory. The baseball and softball teams continued their successful run in the South Shore League using their keen athletic ability and quick wit to rise a cut above the rest.

Acing the Competition

The Norton High School Tennis teams found 1996 to be an exceptional year. Both showed great improvement under the guidance of coaches Terry Mullen and Brian Dalrumple. The girls' team, led by co-captains Christine Hogan and Kathryn McGee, showed great strength and determination throughout the season. Playing a key role in those upsets with her consistence and will to win was Courtney Maher. Newcomers Shanna Cullinane and Laurie Bishop brought new life to the team with their exciting last minute wins and inspiring play. The doubles team of Amy Robinson and Joey Habersack performed successfully despite never before playing on the same side of the net. The same is true for the boys' doubles team of Jeff Kaminski and Aaron Gouveia. Using his dynamic shot making skills and quick footwork, Captain Robert Bakanauskas sparked the boys team. Overall, the Norton tennis teams had an outstanding year filled with a collection of tremendous shots and come from behind wins. In the Course of Time

An activity of skill, strength, and mental toughness, golf is one of the most challenging sports known to man. It requires that a player remain focused at all times. Just the slightest bend of the elbow, tilt of the head, or any lapse in concentration can cause a disaster for a golfer. This is precisely why concentration was key for the N.H.S. 1996 golf team. Under the direction of first time coach John Keiser and lead by seniors Matt Allen and Steve Gendrolious, the team steadily grew stronger as the season continued. Each golfer, dreaming of having the strength and ability of Jack Nicklaus, blew away his opponent in fierce competition. Mike Bonacci and Chris Maguire proved to be instrumental, consistently making critical putts in important situations. Derek Shoemaker also displayed this kind of heroics and became one of the most valuable players on the team. With its winning strokes and outstanding skills, the team showed that hard work equals success.

A Race Against Time

Muscles were stretched, minds were focused, and sneakers were properly tied. Under the watchful eyes of Larry Larocque, Robert Rukstalis, and Amy Babbit, the track team ran, sprinted, and jumped their way through a great season. Jesse Niedringhaus set the track ablaze with his lightning speed. After the track cooled off, the dust began to fly as Chris Henson blew past everyone in his path. Fleet of foot, Josh Jardin consistently won his events on race day. The girls also made their mark during the season. Time and time again, Melissa Foley sprinted her way to victory. The shot put and discus were lofted into flight through the strength of Bekki Larocque. Other members such as Amanda Galante and Jill Murphy also put forth a great deal of effort. This exact type of effort proved to be essential in sprinting towards the finish line, breaking through the tape, and recording another win.

Setting the Standard

As the Norton High School volleyball team jogged on to the court, the tension mounted within the stomachs of the opposing team. Energized and ready to win, the Lancers pulled out a 14-4 season. Once again, they were one of the toughest teams in the Mayflower League. Under the exceptional training of coach Peter Leddy, as well as the outstanding leadership of co-captains Christine Hogan and Lorie Navedo, this group of talented girls once again led N.H.S. to the MIAA Tournament. They performed extraordinarily, taking their opponents to a fifth and deciding match. However, the season was not without its flaws as key players Monica Hubbell and Jessica Carrier were both injured. In the end, both Lancers came back to help the volleyball team fight courageously towards victory. As the season continued, the girls were rewarded with confidence as well as lasting friendships. Neither of these accolades, though, can be replaced by a killer serve, a crushing spike, or a game saving dig. Even through their endless hours of practice and play, the volleyball team consistently gave their best and reached for excellence.

With speeds of a 747, Christine Hogan does her best to avoid a crash landing.

Showing their mighty strength, the cheerleaders prove that the football players aren't the only ones to fear.

Pom-Pons and Pizazz

The exhilaration of being lifted towards the sky filled Keyia Canto while a cheer echoed in her ears. Determined not to let her fall, captain Dianne Johnson and Thuy-Anh Nguyen completed yet another huge extension while Captain Kendra Sands led the other girls in a rhythmic dance.

The Norton High School Cheerleaders tried their best to increase school spirit and participation. Glowing with excitement, they always captivated the crowds with their upbeat half-time exhibitions. The girls had a new leader this year in Miss Kendra Duffy. Her innovative guidance was easily seen in the interesting and well choreographed routines. Norton's cheerleaders reached new heights with their innovative flips and amazing basket tosses. This close knit team was truly dedicated to the squad and to supporting the Lancers. Only girls with such pep and confidence could remind our sports teams to remain strong and fight for victory.

Surfing the Net

With the smell of victory in the air, the girls' soccer team made its way onto the field. The team was led by captains Tanya Collins, Melissa Foley, and Sara Pray. With offensive weapon Katie Sbardella, the team flew down the field. Displaying their clever maneuvers, the girls went head to head with the opposing team. One quick kick later, the ball hit the back of the net and the crowd and the players celebrated another amazing victory. At the same time another crowd erupted as the boys' team worked magic of their own. Captains Nick Sbardella and Jeff Kaminski sprinted down the sidelines looking for an open teammate. Almost immediately, Jesse Niedringhaus and Steve Reardon appeared, both ready to strike. From out of nowhere Sam Abdallah came into view, and the ball was perfectly placed at his feet. With ease, the ball was slipped past the goalie, and the boys' soccer team placed themselves in the tournament. Both soccer teams recorded excellent records this year. Spectacular play in key situations as well as positive attitudes contributed to the success of these teams.

Spreading their talent and donating time to the community, the class of 1998 rewrote the definition of diversity. Students, such as Colleen Belmonte and Corey Bachand, belonged to local youth groups which earned money for charities and helped build homes as part of the Habitat for Humanity Project. Other students volunteered their services in nursing homes, hospitals, or teaching C.C.D. Some of the juniors choose to spend their time outside, taking advantage of the nice weather to practice for the eXtreme Games. Among those talented few who could stick a 360 pike were skateboarders Rob Klawitter and Adam Perreault. Rollerblading was also a popular hobby and form of transportation. Those who opted for rollerblades over cars, like Colin Ramsey and Brandon Wright, could be seen jumping curbs and avoiding afternoon rush hour. The class of 1998 also had a growing hunger for expression. Hours of practice and training, as well as the love of music, convinced Michelle Kiely to write songs for her own band. Actors like Phil Claflin and Mike Sirois showed their interpretations through the creation of characters on stage. Still, other students found the Internet to be a perfect site for exploration. Surfing the Net, Tim Mulherin and Eric Bewley discovered new worlds while still sitting in the school library. Diversity best described this group of young adults. Their participation in various activities and groups just enhanced their uniqueness.

Class of 1999

As the last graduating class of the twentieth century, the class of 1999 showed great spirit and dedication towards their peers and their community. Because the class helped so much last year, it was invited once again to Hallsmith Sysco to lend a helping hand at the annual Christmas party. Students such as Erik Nollette and Adam Gallagher kept the employees' children occupied while the festivities went on. Motivation and support brought an excellent turn out for the construction of the class wall. Helpers like Jenn Follen and Lynda Clare contributed their ideas for this pep rally tradition, whether artistic or idealistic. Thanks to their creativity, the wall received much praise from all. In between babysitting and studying, many sophomores found time to join the ever popular youth groups around the area. Some found relaxation by listening to the sounds of their favorite groups. Others such as Dan Niedringhaus, Jeff McManus, and Jay Carrine created some of their own tunes and started their band "EK". The class of 1999, with its wide range of activities and pastimes, paved its way to a brighter future. Because of the class's numerous efforts, its mark will be left on the twentieth century and their impact will be felt throughout history.

Class of 2000

Although the freshmen did not arrive at N.H.S. as the youngest students, they still had to adapt to a whole new environment. When the class of 2000 first stepped onto school territory, the ceilings seemed higher, the corridors longer, and the floor plan more confusing. They had to make many adjustments to the school and to a whole new group of people. The various sports, activities, and clubs that the high school offered made these adjustments smoother. These new opportunities gave each freshman a chance to become a true part of the student body. Those who found spare time after school and activities put forth energy in the area of recreation. Corin Jackson and Marybeth Lima experienced some head to head competition while participating in basketball. Indoor soccer was the sport of choice for Nate Gouveia and Andy McDavitt. Sports were not the only activities engaged in by the freshmen, however. While learning discipline and refining their talent, Laura Durniok and Jill Durniok showed dedication as they danced their way through their eleventh year of dance lessons. These talents were displayed at the "Welcome Freshmen and Eighth Grade Dance" that was sponsored by the freshman class. This dance enabled the two grades to become aquainted with one another. The class of 2000 gave its time and effort to make the eighth graders transition one of ease. This motivation to lend a helping hand enabled the class of 2000 to light the way for the future of N.H.S.

Class of 2001

Who were these new faces roaming around the school? They were the class of 2001. Young and numerous, their exciting and diverse presence was well worth the crowded corridors. Although many students were apprehensive about their early high school start, they enjoyed the extra privileges that they were granted. After the first week, the eighth graders discovered compensation for their uprooting: freedom. Whether it was wandering the halls or socializing with upperclassmen, they soon gained confidence and a new found maturity. Their early move gave rise to various after school activities, which were eagerly pursued. Thanks to these activities, they successfully integrated themselves into "high school life". The eighth graders, along with the help of Devon Almeida, successfully established their own student council. Having been introduced to foreign languages in the high school, Emily Silvia went a step further by taking Spanish classes. Driven by their love for the arts, Kendra Champagne broadened her musical horizons by taking guitar lessons, while Meghan Orlando took art classes. By receiving these additional freedoms and opportunities, the eighth grade class seized the day and extended their education far beyond the commonplace eighth grade classwork.

Friends Forever

You are always my friend
when I am happy
or when I am sad
when I am all alone
or when I am with people
You are always my friend
if I see you today or if I see you
a year from now
if I talk to you today or if I talk to you
a year from now
You are always my friend
and though through the years
we will change
it doesn't matter what I do or it doesn't matter what you do Throughout our lifetime
you are always my friend

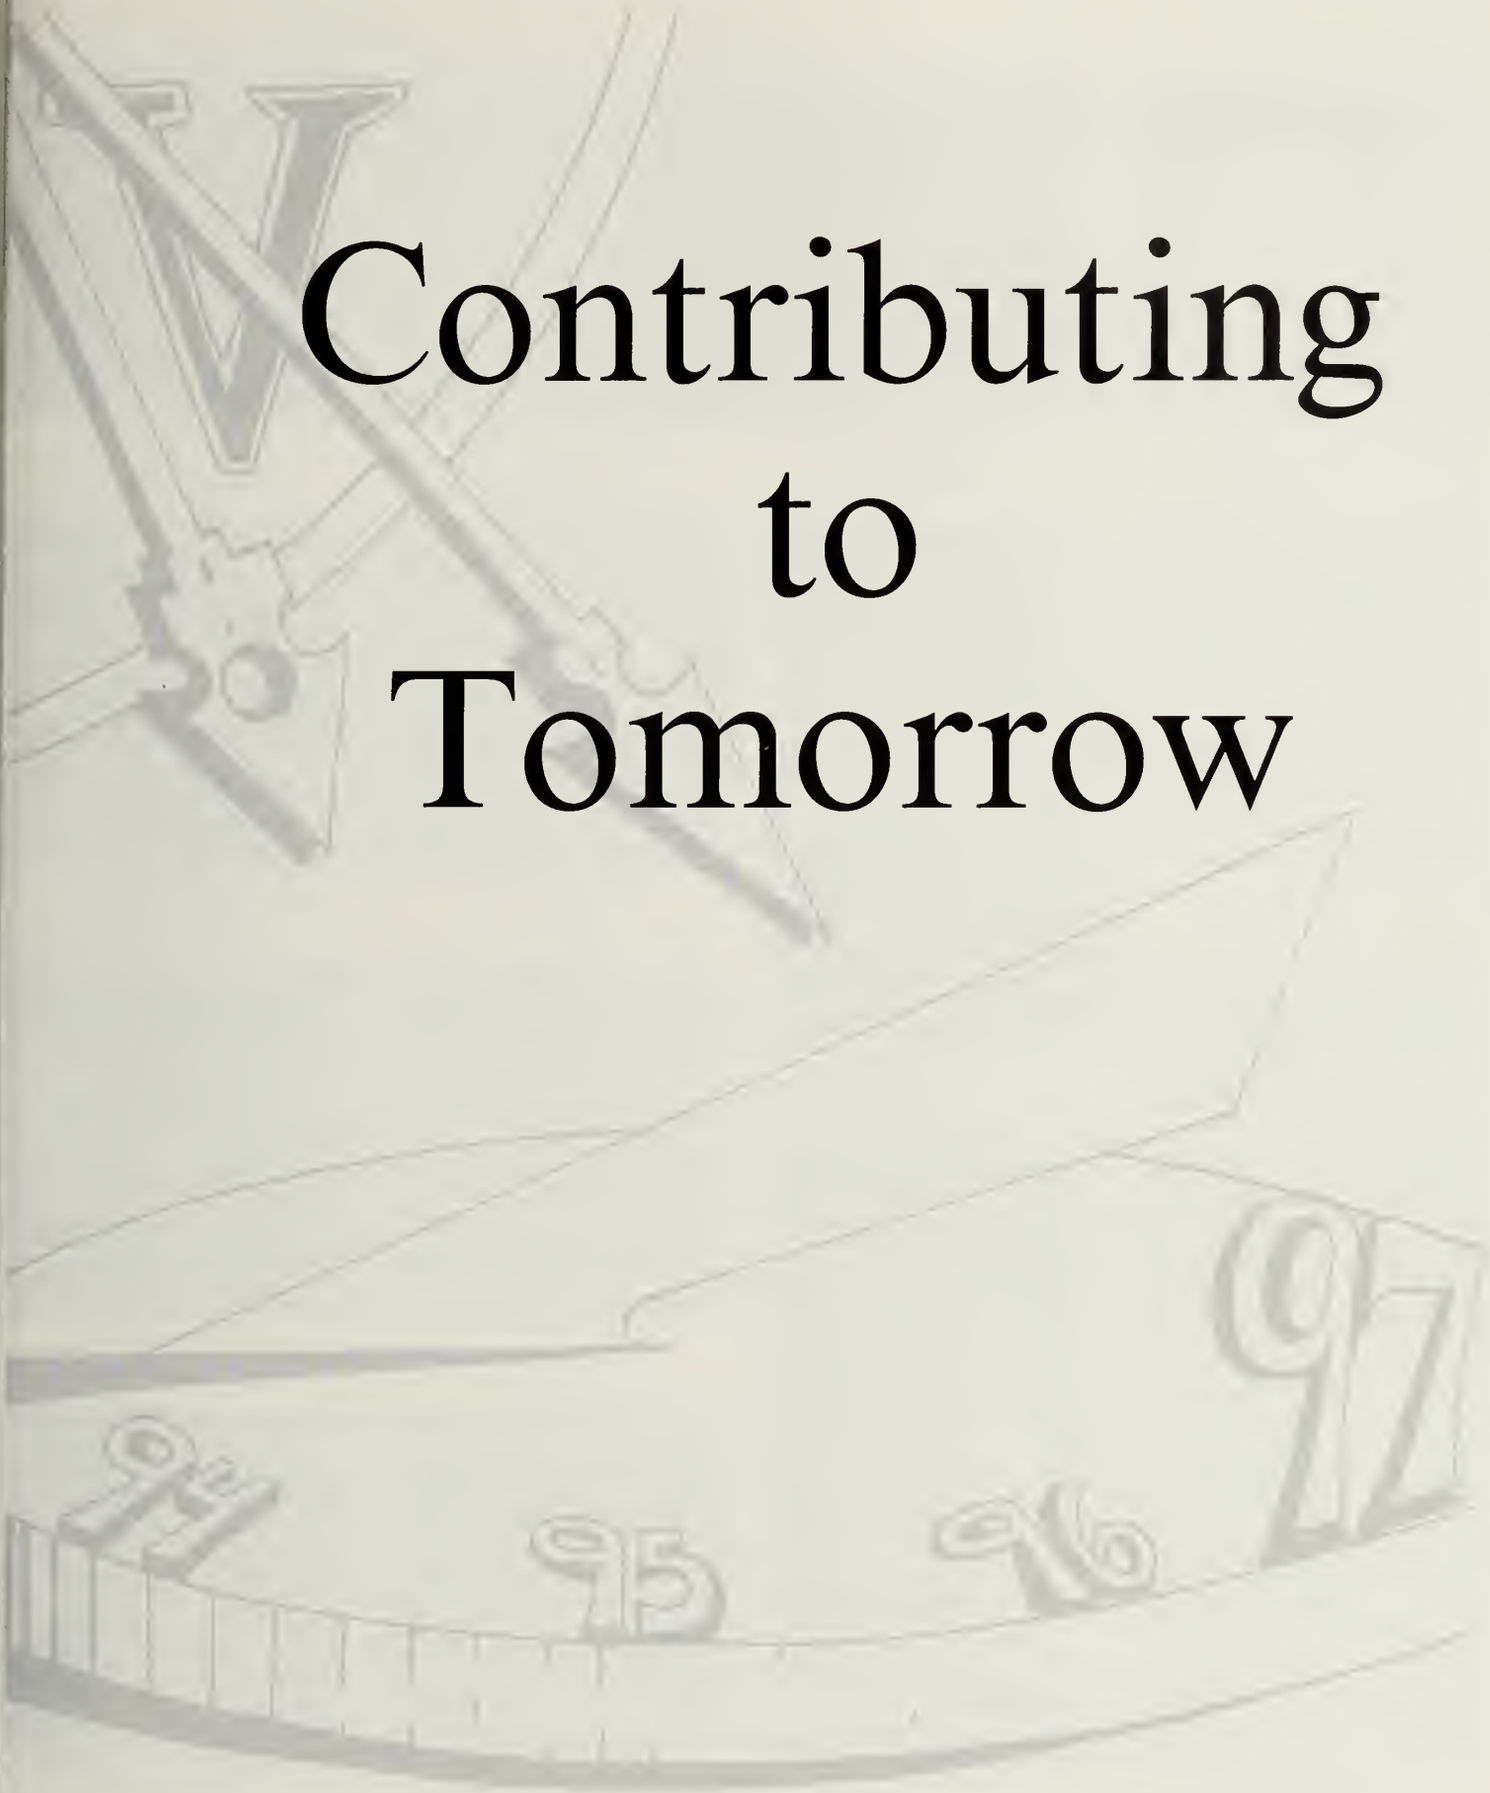
Contributing to Tomorrow



An undercurrent of organization, encouragement, and support runs throughout the halls of Norton High School. Everyday, over seven hundred students walk through the doors of N.H.S. and are greeted by the staff of teachers, counselors, and custodians, that keep their school running smoothly. The teachers continuously present the students with facts, figures, and creative ideas to enhance their minds and emotions. The counselors lend a helping hand whenever the stress of school gets too hectic. At the same time, the custodians keep the learning environment clean for everyone. Whether a simple word of advice or a cheerful smile, each faculty member makes a contribution to the students' day.

These contributions, great or small, make a difference in the lives of the students and can be used as positive reinforcements for the future. As mentors, the faculty members of Norton High School play a major part in the lives of all of the students. They leave a lasting mark that cannot be erased by distance of time.

"Almost finished," thinks Mike Sirois happily as he makes a few last minute corrections.

Hoping to work on its tan, the Scamp has chosen the perfect spot to catch some rays.

"What exactly do fashion models get payed these days," questions Tom Ross to buddy Dan Webber.

For those of us who spent our year at NHS, whether as teachers, underclassmen, or departing seniors, time seemed to go by so swiftly that it was sometimes difficult to keep up with. Many events and activities unfolded right before our eyes. With memories so plentiful, it was nearly impossible to clearly remember them all. We, the editors of Sojourn '97 have compiled a collection of momentos, tokens, and keepsakes in the form of pictures and words. For years to come, all those who delve into these pages will have the opportunity to experience a year at N.H.S. for the first or possibly a next time.

This year, Norton High School became the second home to five grades instead of the four it had always hosted in the past. Because of a growing population of school age children in Norton, the eighth grade was relocated to the high school. The time span in between classes seemed to decrease greatly as packed hallways impeded the journey from one corridor to the next. As the amount of available oxygen in the hallways decreased, the size of school organizations increased with the participation of eighth grade students.

Although the mild winter season produced only one delay of school, the students of N.H.S. did experience a day off. After arriving at school to find fire trucks and groups of students and teachers gathered outside, everyone was soon sent home. A small fire which started in one of the art rooms sent smoke and soot throughout the building. It wasn't until 24 hours later, when the students again arrived at school, that janitors and specially hired crews finished the brunt of the cleaning

With yet another passing year, N.H.S. went through a number of changes and adjustments. However, the level of hard work and dedication put forth by us, the editors of Sojourn '97, remained the same. Now, by producing this publication, we offer a glimpse into the heart, mind, and soul of Norton High School. The time has come for us to share this collection of memories and precious moments with those who made them possible. We can only hope that these priceless memories will live on forever, and that their time will never end.

COLOPHON

Sojourn '97 was printed by the Taylor Publishing Company in Dallas, TX. This book was created using the Macintosh program UltraVision. The selling price was $39 if paid in full and $41 if paid in installments. The cover was designed by Todd Kefor and Rhiannon Kirby and was written in Times Roman which is also used on the turnover pages. The cover is Purple Frontier with Gold Foil, and the book uses 80 lb. enamel paper.

In the sports section of the book, Vanguard is used for captions and text, while the headlines are done in Rinna. Finesse is used for captions and text in the Activities section and Muse Script and Nouveau Gothic is used for headlines. Times Roman is used for the Underclassmen section, and Genesis is used in the senior section, with Jefferson as the headlines. Gourmand, Nouveau Gothic and Embassy are used in the Student Life section, while Athena is used in the Faculty section.

Various pop prints were used throughout the book.

The editors and staff would like to thank our customer service representatives, Conrad Schmidt from Taylor Publishing Company, for all their help in this publication, and Joe Geoffrey of Chestnut Hills for all of his time, pictures, and film.

A big thanks to our advisor Miss Archibald and our business advisor Mrs. Moynihan, without whom this production would not have been possible. We also thank Mrs. Vital for her help with our computers and the many people who have braved the library, knowing they will be lured into writing copy or some other hideous task. Thank you!!
